SWEET PEAS

Extra Early Varieties for Fall Planting

By sowing Sweet Pea seed in the fall, blooms will be produced very much earlier than those from spring sown seed, the plants will be sturdier and the blooms will be larger and more brilliant in color. The seed may be planted in October or November, in a trench six or eight inches deep, and covered two or three inches deep. As the plants grow, more soil should be drawn around them until the trench is full. The soil should be very rich, plenty of fertilizer used, and it should be well drained. The plants may not make much growth during the winter, but will make a great root growth, which will give them a splendid start early in spring.

The following Extra Early varieties are the most suitable for fall planting outdoors and forcing indoors. Our complete list will be shown in The Spring Book.

Burpee's Early Blue Jacket. Rich, dark, navy-blue self. Extremely free-flowering. Usually produced in fours.
Burpee's Early Canary Bird. Rich deep cream or primrose colored self. Flowers very large and beautifully waved; three or four on a stem.
